City of Mexico Letter to the Boston Herald.

In Mexico, the woman doctor has arrived, and is building up a clientele, and we have also a woman lawyer, beside innumerable teachers of the "female persuasion," all bright, capable and energetic young women. Women are being employed in the national postal service and are giving satisfaction. Soon they will begin to invade the great government departments, and will suppont the languid young dudes who now smoke cigarettes. partments, and will supplement the languid young dudes who now smoke cigarettes incessantly and manage to kill time at the government expense. The dudelet of the national palace and of the government offices outside is a study in pink shirts and tall collars. He certainly toils not, aithough he spins yarns in office hours, and he is "the man with two hats," for one is soft, which he can carry in an inside pockage of all the boats lost was five years. riety, which he leaves on his desk white he saunters out of doors wearing his soft he saunters out of doors wearing his soft hat! The chief of his bureau comes to his desk and asks, absent-mindedly, "Where is Carlitos? Ah, I see he is in some other office, for here's his hat!" Credulous chief of bureau! your Carlitos is even now down on Plateros street, ogling the pretty girls and "throwing them flowers," as they say in Spanish.

The Chrysanthemum.

From Longman's Magazine. When the plant was introduced, about 1840, it was only the small daisy-like flower. now only seen as a rule in cottage gardens, which was highly prized as a novelty. The taste for growing and showing it began early, and before 1860 there were many chrysanthemum societies in existence, among them the Stoke Newington, which formed the nucleus of the National Society. Yet it was not until 1859, when the plants suffered severely from early frosts, that there was any idea of growing them under glass. The Japanese variety was noticed in 1861 as a novelty, "very curious and interesting, but scarcely ornamental." How little did the author of these remarks suspect what a future was before the plant so summarily set aside! Three years later, however, we find Japanese varieties recommended with pompom and incurved, and since then they have ever increased in

The gorgeously colored mop-like blooms now exhibited every autumn would certainly astonish that writer of thirty years ago. The golden and bronze shades of the chrysanthemum suited the taste of the promoters of the "high art" aesthetic movement of a few years ago, which, if it had no oth-er merit, helped to bring this flower more forward and revived the culture of sun-flowers, which were fast becoming extinct in our gardens.

Jewish Shekel Worth $5,000.

From the New York Tribune. Charles Lunn and J. J. Shragge of Winnipeg are the possessors of a rare coin. Numismatists say that it is worth from $5,000 to $6,000. The coin is a Jewish silver shekel, worth intrinsically about 52 cents. and about as large as an American or Canadian half dollar. It appears to be very ancient. On the one side is a representation of Aaron's rod, with the words "Jerusalem the Hely" in Hebrew characters, and on the other a pot of manna and the inscription, in the same characters, "Shekel

Above the pot of manna there is supposed to be a sort of effulgence or scroll, bearing in the middle a Hebrew character. Upon the presence of this mark, which experts can detect by heating the coin, depends its genuineness. Experts state that the coin is the shekel coined by Simon Maccabeus, high priest and ruler of the Jews, 140 B. C. He was famous in Jewish history. The coin was obtained by the present holders from a person in whose prospection is head. from a person in whose possession it had been for over twenty years. The present holders have each a half interest in it. The coin is in a safety deposit vault, when it can only be taken by the two jointly. The Numismatic Bank of Boston places the value of the piece at from $5,000 to $6,000. The owners are no from Great Britain.

Found a Lot of Silver.

From the Baltimore American. Max Dukes, who lives in Baltimore Hundred. Del., while cutting timber on the farm, struck something that blunted the sharp edge of his ax. He at once went to work to see what it war, and soon discovered it to be a large stone buried in the ground. After working for some time the stone was removed, and to his surprise a large iron pot was hidden beneath it. Dukes was not long in digging out the pot, and it was full of silver money. He counted the treasure over, and found that it amounted It is thought the money was buried

It is thought the money was buried there by a man who lived on the farm during the late war, and who was known to have considerable money, but his heirs never knew what he did with it. "Want" ads. in The Star pay because they

MILLIAM E. EDMONSTON,

ABSENT-MINDED OFFICIAL.

Peculiar Ways of Bobt. W. Taylor, Former Controller of the Trensury. rom the Chicago Record. The discovery of the bundles of postal orders and bank checks tucked away in the pigeonholes of Mr. Spofford's desk and on the shelves of the old Congressional Library reminds me of a similar disclosure after the death of Robert W. Taylor, who was for many years controller of the treasury. He and Mr. Spofford had many characteristics in common. They were both very absent-minded men, and habitually careless about their belongings. Mr. Taylor's desk was a curiosity. The clerks used to open the door of his office a crack so as to let their friends have a peep at it. It was covered with a pile of papers about eighteen inches thick, the accumulation of several years of official life, which grew higher every month, as new documents were added to the accumulation. It was one of Mr. Taylor's peculiarities that he would rever allow his desk to be dusted, and would discharge a clerk or messenger who disturbed a single paper upon it. He claimed to know every document in the colwho disturbed a single paper upon it. He claimed to know every document in the collection and insisted that he was able to find it in case it was wanted. He preferred to spread things out upon his desk in that way rather than file them away in pigeonholes. Every afternoon, when the old gentleman left the office the janitor would cover his precious rile, with a big called tleman left the office the janitor would cover his precious pile with a big calico spread to protect it from the dust.

After Mr. Taylor died his deputy, who underteck to examine and file away the decuments and manuscripts that had accumulated upon the desk during the twenty-five at thirty years he was in office, nade some important discoveries. Important papers that had mysteriously disappeared and for which the department had been searched over and over again, were brought to light, and among other things a United States bond for several thousand dollars that had been held up as irregular several years before and referred

The bond mysteriously disappeared and was forgotten until the owner had written to the department seventeen or eighteen times demanding its return. Then, as the officials could find no trace of it, he prought suit in the Court of Claims to rebrought suit-in the Court of Claims to re-cover its value from the government, hold-ing the Secretary of the Treasury-was re-sponsible for its preservation. When the missing bond was found among Mr. Tay-lor's literary remains the Attorney General was notified. and arranged a settlement was notified, and arranged a settlement with the owner under which the govern-ment paid his attorney's fees and the cost of the suit.

ON THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

Wonderful Growth of Business of That Mighty Stream.

From the Pittsburg Dispatch. The first vessels that ever entered the Mississippi from the sea were the French frigates Renommee and Gironde, January 6, 1700. These vessels proceeded as far as the Tenesas, which they reached April 12. The first vessel built on the banks of the Mississippi by white men was launched in 1541, shortly after the death and burial of De Soto. The boatmen and early navigators of the present century were long in danger from Indians and pirates. A notorious resort for these was flatboats and crews were sacrificed there until these pests were exterminated by mob law, in 1809. For the five years foliowing 1822, however, the destruction by snags on the Ohio and Mississippi amounted to $1,362,500, though the next have years showed but $23,200 to see from the years showed but $$$1,000 loss from the same cause. In 1842 there were 450 steam-boats on the Mississippi and its tributaries, with an average burden of 200 tons and an aggregate value of $7,200,000.

In operating these boats about 35,750 persons were employed. The average value of the products carried each season was something like $200,000, or an aggregate of age of all the boats lost was five years. From 1816 to 1871 there were 80 explosions, involving a loss of life in each varying from 1 to 1,649.
